

‘The Devil Wears Prada Wishes’: Ex-Pop Star Assistant Matthew Addison Unveils The Last Living Diva

A new era begins November 1, 2026 for Matthew Addison’s novel of fame, obsession, and the price of getting too close.

LOS ANGELES, CA. Ex-pop star assistant Matthew Addison draws on his experience behind the scenes in The Last Living Diva, published by Illusion Publishing. The novel follows a devoted fan whose dream job inside a pop superstar’s world comes at a cost.

Hayden worshipped pop legend Alexis Shane. Then she hired him. Freshly unemployed and desperate for a glamorous life, he sees the job as his ticket to a world tour and a place behind the velvet rope. But Alexis’s ruthless entourage is playing a game he doesn’t know the rules to, and the woman he idolized is far more vulnerable than her public image suggests.

As his relationship with his fiancé begins to crumble, Hayden must decide how much of himself he is willing to sacrifice for the life he thought he wanted. The closer he gets to his idol, the harder it becomes to separate devotion from destruction.

Drawing on Addison’s experience as a celebrity assistant, The Last Living Diva brings an insider’s perspective to the private machinery of fame: the competing loyalties and the uneasy intimacy of working for someone the world thinks it knows.

“The Last Living Diva is gripping and funny, but at its heart, it’s a story about compassion. People assume celebrities have it all. But when everyone around you is on payroll, how do you know who to trust?” says Matthew Addison.

For book information, visit thelastlivingdiva.com. To request a review copy, email Nicole at press@thelastlivingdiva.com with your outlet and preferred format.

About Matthew Addison

Matthew Addison is a Los Angeles-based writer, entrepreneur, and ex-celebrity assistant. He is the founder and CEO of viral self-tanning brand Illusion Bronze and shares pop-culture commentary online as @matty_addy. He has a combined social media following of 900,000 followers. The Last Living Diva is his debut novel.

Media Contact

Nicole
press@thelastlivingdiva.com
thelastlivingdiva.com